Q: Get multiple values from PHP variable How do I get multiple values from a single PHP variable? For example, I have this value in my variable: "name" => "Sally", "age" => 24, "gender" => "female" How do I get the values "name", "age" and "gender" out of this? I don't know how to access these values. A: All variables in php are associative, i.e: $foo = "name" => "Sally", $bar = 24, $gender = "female"; $foo['name'], $bar, $gender; // Returns Sally, 24, female A: You will need to use the Array functions, these are common to all languages. // Create an array $names = array("name" => "Sally", "age" => 24, "gender" => "female"); // Access echo $names['name']; A: You can access an array using a dot notation, as shown here: $numbers = ['num1' => 10, 'num2' => 20, 'num3' => 30]; echo $numbers['num1']; // will output 10 You can do this with a single line of code, not sure why you would want to save the quotes, but this is how you 3da54e8ca3
