So whether your tribe is reppin' it the traditional way with a T-shirt and bikini, or embarking on a series of brutal double dates, these are the channel-hopping triumphs of 2018 – and hopefully, the channel-hopping triumphs of 2019. (Featured image: Netflix) Love Island Over the last couple of years, Love Island has become the home of girls and women whose only superpower is becoming a one-hit wonder, as they're each given a theme song that describes them more accurately than any other song could. This year, it's dragging its feet with "Have We Got a Deal For You". (Featured image: ITV2) Call the Midwife A show that's literally only in the UK is always going to draw a certain, hysterical type of viewer. I'm a filthy rich cocaine addict who lives in a yacht and spends her time being an all-round domestic goddess, so I'm going to be watching this. (Featured image: BBC) Call the Midwife I'm not at all ashamed to admit that I've had a massive soft spot for this show, and this year's chapter, which tells the story of Sarah, the first black woman to be nannied, has been an extra special treat. There's always a dangerous undertone of injustice running through the show's storylines, but the production values are strong, and not

TheGOOD Uploadr For Windows

- Easy to Use - Upload pictures by Drag and Drop - Compatible with all Windows and Mac OS computersQ: Tastytip - dealing with constraints in a nested resource I am trying to build a nested resource that validates that one of the id's is validated. I'm doing this by adding a custom method to the Resource, which I post in the Request.data attribute. The issue I'm having is that in this method, id = current_user.profile.id That line seems to default the value of the argument to True. Shouldn't it be returning just id? Here is my method in question. class UserProfileResource(CommonProfileResource): param_overrides = { 'fields': '_all_', 'id': 'profile' } methods = ['PATCH'] def __init__(self, request, kwargs): super(UserProfileResource, self).__init__(request, kwargs) if 'id' in request.data and request.data['id'] == False: raise Exception('Id is False') else: id = current_user.profile.id self.id = id def is_valid(self, cleaned_data): id = cleaned_data['id'] user = User.objects.get(id=id) try: profile = self.resource_class.objects.get(pk=id) if not profile.is_valid(self): return False except User.DoesNotExist: return False return True A: 09e8f5149f
