A disease activity index of systemic sclerosis (SSc) is widely used in clinical trials for systemic sclerosis. The purpose of this study is to assess the serum concentration of fibroblast growth factor-2 (FGF-2) in SSc and its response to interferon-alpha (IFN-alpha) treatment. Serum FGF-2 levels were measured by enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay in 37 patients (19 with limited cutaneous SSc and 18 with diffuse cutaneous SSc) and 20 healthy subjects. The serum FGF-2 level was significantly lower in SSc (p Effect of temperature on the kinetics of alpha,beta-unsaturated aldehydes during peroxidation. Phenylacetaldehyde and 2,4-pentadienal are peroxidation products of polyunsaturated fatty acids, and a large portion of the aldehydes formed have been implicated as mediators of the cytotoxic action of free radicals. The kinetics of the formation of these alpha,beta-unsaturated aldehydes during a peroxidation process were studied in a batch reactor at 20 and 45 degrees C, and their products were identified by liquid chromatography-mass spectrometry. The alpha,beta-unsaturated aldehydes were formed during the peroxidation, but their concentration varied with the type of lipid. The rate of formation increased with temperature and with the degree of unsaturation

Finally, the charging party has not demonstrated by showing factual or legal impossibility that he will be able to establish that the claim he now asserts arose out of the same set of operative facts or events that was the subject of the prior action. 12 Lonergan provides the last possible explanation for the failure to appeal. The Lonergan court specifically refused to address the question whether one claim may be tolled by another if the first claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations. 46 Cal.Rptr. at 703. The Lonergan court assumed that the first claim barred from suit was extinguished and that res judicata thus prevented a second claim based on the same cause of action. "To hold that the commencement of the running of the applicable statute of limitations following the dismissal of the first action constituted a tolling of the statute of limitations on the second action, would be to give to the trial court in the second action the same extent of power over the first action that it has over a compulsory counterclaim
