ABOUT MIRGA SANCTUARY: History of Games • Community • Features • Developer Profile • News Removing a Fragment, will the FragmentManager keep track of the object? I have a fragment containing a row of buttons (arranged horizontally, clicking each one removes it). Here's the problem: as the buttons are being removed, the object the button references (an int I store in the button's tag and hold in the Activity) is still being accessed by the FragmentManager (as I make the Object reference). Now, as it's still being tracked, the FragmentManager will not allow me to create a new object because the reference is the same. Is there any way to get rid of that reference? Thank you! A: Yes. The FragmentManagers do not automatically keep track of the instances of Fragment stored within the FragmentManager. I've added another answer before that may be of some help. Also, have a look at this answer, where @nos suggested a way of deleting the activity that hosts your listView.
