The worldwide public health burden of methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) has been well documented; however, the persistence of MRSA in the community and the lack of recent evidence regarding the global distribution of MRSA have prompted concern that MRSA is no longer a major problem. To evaluate these issues, a systematic review was conducted according to predefined criteria. The PubMed database was searched systematically through June 2005. All articles that contained data on the incidence of MRSA, along with recent information on MRSA carriage and infection in well-defined populations, were selected. Factors influencing the epidemiology of MRSA were determined, and a map was generated to display the distribution of reported data. Data were reviewed from 13 countries, including those contributing countries that have documented the highest rates of MRSA. Most countries with a reported MRSA burden showed stable or decreasing trends during the past decade. Data from these countries were plotted on a map to illustrate trends in the prevalence of MRSA in these regions.

Keyboard layout modifies cursor style (XCursor) I have been using XCursor for quite a while now, but today I discovered something very strange: The layout of the keyboard controls the cursor style, but none of the keyboard shortcuts changes that. I tried all the default modifier combinations, with no luck. I also tried to remove the layouts, but same result. The solution works both in Xcode and in the Terminal. I have no idea what's causing this. This kind of incongruity is not common, and perhaps I'm just missing something obvious. My system is Snow Leopard, Xcode is 4.4.1, and my XCursor package is: x11-xquartz-X11.14.1.zip A: I think you can try to force the option selected in Preferences/Xcode/Preferences/Display & Keyboard/Editors. The reason for having the issue is that 2 Xcode beta versions were installed in parallel on my computer, which means that the issue is related to Xquartz rather than Xcode. The following solution worked for me: In Xcode, close all open editor windows. Open Finder and navigate to /Applications/Xcode.app/Contents/Versions/. This will show you all the existing beta versions
