Introducing GENOA: The City of AdventuresA beautiful summer day, a tall young Genoan in red trousers walks along the Ramo di San Pietro on the city's picturesque waterfront, contemplating the day ahead. This is his day off and he's used to enjoying a good swim in the Mediterranean. Maybe, he thinks, he could enjoy a coffee at one of the bars nearby? He spies a well-dressed man leaning over a railing, looking across the water at a small island. The young man strides towards the man and waits. For a moment they stare at each other, sharing a glance of mutual recognition. The man stands up and genuflects as he approaches the young man, who introduces himself as Beppe. Beppe is soon to be joined by his two brothers and his sister. "What are you doing?" his friends ask. "I'm going to visit the island. My father has been there," Beppe replies. They continue to walk, and the group is soon lost in a sea of people. The group reaches a pier and begins to walk along it. They look at each other, noticing that they all have the same colours: the colour of the seas, the colour of the sky, the colour of the day, the colour of the tide. They are a family of swimmers with endless variations on the same colour. Then a seagull flies over them and they all become the same colour as it, showing their kindred union and their solidarity with the land and sea. The island is empty. They realise that the man they had met on the waterfront was a sage in a monk's robe. After a moment of silence, Beppe reflects on what has just happened to him. He thanks the man in the monk's robe for his kindness, for the way he has helped him. Beppe finishes his reflection by thanking the man for opening his eyes to the love he always felt for this beautiful city.
