Field of the Invention The present invention relates to electrostatic atomizer head and processes for producing the same. More particularly, the invention relates to an electrostatic atomizer head for spraying a fuel solution onto the surface of a group of fibers, and a process for producing the same.

2. Description of the Prior Art The chemical fiber-processing industry is widely applicable to a variety of manufacturing processes, and accordingly, the industry is flourishing. Among the many manufacturing processes, the production of incense sticks is very common and traditional. As for other processes, however, such as the production of fragrance oils, the common chemical fiber-processing process is to treat fibers with chemicals. The chemicals are, however, very viscous and hard to be applied onto fibers. U.S. Pat. No. 5,593,927 describes a process for producing fragrance oils with a hand-held electrostatic atomizer head capable of spraying a liquid perfume over a group of fibers. The atomized particles of perfume can be adsorbed on the fibers by the fibers' surface charge so that a fragrance is developed. Although this spray process has the advantages of easy operation and simple process control, the cost of the electrostatic atomizer head is relatively high and, more importantly, the atomized particles of the perfume are hard to retain on the fibers after the spray process, so that the perfume cannot be well developed. In view of the foregoing drawbacks of the prior art, the present invention aims to provide an electrostatic atomizer head for spraying a fuel solution onto the surface of a group of fibers, and a process for producing the same, which are capable of spraying a fuel solution on the surface of a group of fibers and enabling the sprayed fuel solution to be adsorbed on the fibers. Moreover, the process for producing the electrostatic
