All-new Player Intelligence - Every player is individually modeled, every action is simulated, and every nuance has been carefully studied to create the most realistic football experience on the game. These advances can be felt in every area of FIFA 22, with every player-manager you build, play, and develop - and even in the way they move, run, and pass the ball. Player Motion - Every player in FIFA 22 moves with more fluidity, speed, and agility than ever before. Every step is realistic, every move is fluid, and every touch is dynamic. FIFA Ball Physics - Made from a new, highly durable material, the FIFA ball feels as responsive as you are to even the slightest touches and movements, making every touch count and every bounce more unpredictable. The physics can be altered through manual or automatic settings. Verified Ratings - Each player has a verified rating. Any match played by the player before the rating was verified will count towards that player's score. FIFA 22 Summary In today's news, DICE have announced that players can have the chance to test out FIFA 22 ahead of its launch in the coming months. An open beta version is planned for this summer, although the game is expected to launch in September next year, with some online features delayed for an "interim" period. Euro 2016 The last Major of 2016 has been won by the French. But that's not what I'm talking about. 2016 has proven to be a year full of upsets in Euro 2016. The Germans beat off Sweden 1-0 in the last 16, something that had been on the cards for some time. Now all that's left is the final, and some of the biggest names will be in the final. We'll be breaking down who should be competing for the final in our guide today, as we get to know some of the newcomers to the tournament

What's new:
