The present invention relates to control of electrical equipment and more specifically to the provision of current limiting protection of associated equipment. In numerous electrical systems, control of electrical equipment requires the use of current limiting protection circuits. Typically, in these circuits, a current limiter is connected across an electrical load in parallel with the load. When the load draws an excessive amount of current, current flow to the load is interrupted to prevent the supply of excessive power to the load. When voltage is applied to the current limiting circuit, a current limiter resistor typically provides a voltage drop which is proportional to the current flowing in the circuit. As a result, the current limiter resistor will provide a nonlinear impedance to a load resistor connected in parallel therewith. This nonlinear characteristic of the current limiter resistor causes the power voltage to appear across the current limiter resistor to drop at an increasing rate with increasing load current. As a result, a voltage drop across the current limiter resistor is presented as a signal to a voltage controlled or current mode control circuit in the electronic control of the electrical equipment. The control circuit is so responsive to the voltage drop across the current limiter resistor that the control circuit changes the output of the control circuit to interrupt current to the electrical load. This change in output, in turn, causes a change in the output of the voltage controlled or current mode control circuit. Thus, if the current limiter circuit is used to protect a particular electrical load, the current limiter circuit causes a current change in the voltage controlled or current mode control circuit which has a corresponding control effect on the controlled electrical equipment. The voltage drop across the current limiter resistor is also coupled to associated equipment or equipment wiring. The voltage drop across the current limiter resistor may be coupled to control the output of a transmitter, receiver or other electrical equipment so that a change in the voltage drop across the current limiter resistor indicates a current load condition. This voltage drop may be coupled to a light emitting diode for example which will light when a load current level is reached. The voltage drop across the current limiter resistor may also indicate a current load condition by the use of an opto-isolator. The voltage drop across the current limiter resistor is coupled to a first input of the opt 0cc13bf012

Brunner And Suddarth's Textbook of Medical Surgical Nursing 13th.The Five Most Overlooked Signs Of a Divorce The divorce rate is on the rise, and the main reason why we're seeing more and more divorces is because today's couples tend to struggle with communication in more ways than one. Couples with high levels of stress tend to have greater divorce risk than those who are less stressed. Here are five signs that, if you see them, could signal the start of a potential divorce. 1. Your spouse has a new partner This is usually a clear sign that your spouse has some serious hidden issues going on in his/her life. The better you can handle these issues, the better you are able to deal with his/her new relationship. Not all newly divorced couples fall apart the moment they split, but some do, and their behavior reflects how far they may have fallen. If you see a newly divorced couple starting to drift apart, you'll know that the relationship is in trouble.

2. Your spouse is constantly fighting with friends and family Just like how your spouse is constantly trying to get you to fight with friends and family, it's your job to tell your spouse when you see this situation happening. If you don't try to stop it, it may really get worse.
3. Your spouse tries to change your friends and family This is usually a sign that your spouse is feeling very isolated from his/her social circle. If your spouse starts to turn your friends against you, or ask you to fire someone who's a close friend of yours, this is a clear sign that he/she is going through a lot of stress and depression. It's not recommended to go against your friends, but if you do, it won't hurt you.
4. Your spouse lost his/her job If your spouse is unemployed, he/she is going through a lot of stress and depression. If you see your spouse struggling in his/her job, consider investing in a career class, considering it's just a matter of time until he/she gets back on his/her feet.
5. Your spouse starts to take out all his/her emotions on
