
Hello Neighbor Alpha 1 Mod [NEW]

none Ophthalmoscopy Ophthalmoscopy (OTOS) is a diagnostic examination of the anterior part of the eye, that is, the area around the eyes, which allows the doctor to study the structure and function of the cornea, anterior chamber of the eye, lens, vitreous body, retina and choroid, as well as to identify pathological changes in this area . More generally, ophthalmoscopy is an "examination" or "examination of the eye" through a mirror and special lenses that allow the doctor to see everything in front of the eyes. It can also be divided into two distinct parts: the anterior, which allows the doctor to see the structure and shape of the cornea, and the posterior, which allows doctors to see the condition of the back of the eye. During an anterior ophthalmoscopy, the ophthalmologist may use a mirror to take an image of the eye. He can also use tools and lenses to improve his visibility. Some instruments used for anterior ophthalmoscopy include:
